This itemizer never knew until a few days ago how well it does pay to display goods in store windows. He was in the store of a certain prominent merchant when a stranger came in and bought some clothing, saying he wouldn't have thought of it had he not seen what suited him displayed at the front as he was passing. Certainly it pays to display your goods

The Accident to Mr. Fellers.

Anderson Intelligencer, 16th. The catastrophe at Portman Shoals last Thursday afternoon has caused more or less general annoyance in the city since that time, but the power situation is being regulated as rapidly as possible. The two young men who were hurt are at the Anderson county hospital. Mr. E. W. Harper, Jr., who was burned by the flying oil is more comfortable now, although his burns were very serious. There has been considerable anxiety on account of the condition of Mr. T. W. Fellers, Jr., who had ugly cuts about the head. An x-ray was made by Dr. Ashmore Sunday and it was found that there is a fracture an inch and a half in length. This however, does not seem to account for the almost total stupor into which the young man was thrown by the accident. It has been four days and yet he has not rallied. This gives rise to the fear that there is a severe concussion in some other part of the head.

(William H. Taft at Pottstown, Conn.)

The President is given a house to live in, a very comfortable, homelike house. In all the world, I venture to say, there is more appropriate official residence for a Chief Executive, nor one better adapted to the simple democratic taste of the American people than the White House at Washington. It is dignified, it is beautiful, it is comfortable, it offers an opportunity for proper entertainment of the President's guests, but as compared with the many palaces of Europe it is much less extensive and much less ornate, and yet it is quite enough to surround him with that freedom from intrusion that the Chief Executive ought to have.
